DEMONSTRATION OF ORAL PROFICIENCY

DR. JULIANA STARR

FRENCH 3197-476 (INTERNET) CLASS # 10939 1 CREDIT

This course is taken concurrently with French 3100 or 3205 or another French 3000+ literature or civilization course. It entails a presentation of a detailed explication de texte in English to the professor teaching the course, and discussion of the chosen text with the professor in a manner designed by him/her. Successful completion of this 1 credit course with the pass/fail grading fulfills the general degree requirement for oral competency in English, which is also a College of Liberal Arts, Education and Human Development requirement.
ROMANCE LITERATURES AND FILM

FRENCH/SPANISH 3405-001 - CLASS #10940 (French) #11736 (Spanish)
T/TH 2:00-3:15 - DR. MANUEL GARCÍA-CASTELLÓN - 3 CR.

Prerequisite: FREN 2002 or SPAN 2002, or departmental consent.

This course, conducted in English, is an introduction to film aesthetics through the screening of motion pictures created by Spanish and French film makers. We will view, analyze and discuss thematic content of selected Spanish and French movies, to see how they depart from, magnify, or diminish the original literary narratives. The goals of the class are twofold: to help students develop ease and fluency in discussing their opinions on the movies viewed, both in speaking and in writing, and to develop a greater appreciation of Spanish and French culture and literature through film.

Requirements: Students must demonstrate active engagement in class since oral participation is an integral segment of their performance and grade. Majors will write two assignments of 3/5 pages each, double spaced, in the target language. Non majors will write those two compositions in English, although they are welcome to use the target language, too.

FRENCH 5202-601 T 4:30 – 7:10 class #10944 (graduate onsite)

An overview of French culture and civilization (history, fine arts, architecture, history of ideas, literature and popular culture) from the end of the Middle Ages to the Napoleonic wars. We will study the evolution of French society throughout this period, follow the evolution of intellectual and cultural life, encounter key characters, and discuss artistic movements. Our approach will be thematic rather than chronological centering on the character of the Outsider. Lectures, notes and discussions will be supplemented by audio-visual material (films, recordings, internet sites…)

The class will be centered on short introductory lectures followed by a discussion of the readings. Class participation is essential. There will be a mid-term exam (short questions/identifications); short reports and a final exam for FREN 4202 students. There will be a mid-term exam (essays); a presentation on secondary sources and a final exam for FREN 5202 students.

The course and the assignments will be in (21st century) French.

TEXTS:
This course concentrates on the structure of the French language from a modern linguistic perspective. Topics include the phonology, morphology, syntax and semantics of French. Readings on linguistic theory complement practical application. The course is conducted primarily in French.

REQUIREMENTS:
1) Short quizzes throughout the semester; 2) Midterm Exam; 3) Final Exam; 4) Research paper
Students also participate in class forums.

REQUIRED TEXTBOOK: Structure du français moderne, quatrième édition
- Publisher: Canadian Scholars' Press Inc.; 4 edition (July 1, 2017)
- Language: French
- ISBN-10: 1551309602 • ISBN-13: 978-1551309606

Additional texts will be suggested at the start of the semester.
This course offers an opportunity to read contemporary French language literature by authors from France and from other parts of the French speaking world. We will read texts by Franco-Senegalese writer Alain Mabanckou, Albert Camus (France), Kamel Daoud (Algeria), Maryse Condé (Guadeloupe) and Alice Zeniter (France). These French language novels will transport us to far-away places where historical French presence has left not only its language but other elements of culture and where intertwining personal narratives come alive through fictional writing.
Students will sit a mid-term, a final exam and submit a final essay.

Selected texts:

Verre cassé (2005) Alain Mabanckou
L’étranger (1942) Albert Camus  et Meursault, contre-enquête (2013), Kamel Daoud
Traversée de la Mangrove (1992) Maryse Condé
L’art de Perdre (2017), Alice Zeniter

ROML 6005-476  Class # 11677  INTERNET  3 CREDITS

This online course will take a comparative approach to the evolution of Romance languages from the Fall of the Western Roman Empire to the geographical distribution of Romance languages. We will analyze sound change, lexico-semantic changes and morphological and syntactic changes, gathered from excerpts of early texts written in Romance to understand what contributes to language shift and change during language contact. Although emphasis will be placed on the five major languages spoken in this group, we will also analyze lesser studied romance languages and varieties of Romance-based pidgins and Creoles.

This course will be conducted in English - There will be short assignments, one midterm, a final project and one final exam

SPANISH CONVERSATION

MR. RICARDO TRIVINO

SPANISH 3031-001  T/TH 11:00-12:15  CLASS #: 11730  3 CREDITS

Prerequisite: Spanish 2002, or departmental consent. This course is aimed at improving the spoken and communicative proficiency of students. The course will also provide exposure to the other language skills (reading and listening-comprehension, writing, vocabulary acquisition, socio-cultural competence) integral to developing speaking fluency. Certain grammar points will be reviewed based on the texts and on issues that arise in class.

Students will be asked to bring articles from newspapers and magazine with news from the Spanish-speaking world. The format of the class will be “cooperative learning.”

There will be 2 exams: a Midterm and a Final.

This course will strengthen the student’s knowledge of Spanish. We will review grammatical structures as well as lexical variations through in-class exercises and activities. There will be two to three one-hour tests and two exams—a midterm and a final. Other assessments (quizzes) will also be included.

Prior completion of Spanish 2002 or placement into “2002 or above” is required.

INTRODUCTION TO THE FIELDS OF TRANSLATION AND INTERPRETING

Dr. Lisbeth A. Philip

SPAN 4070-601 (Undergraduate) Class # 11824 / SPAN 5070-601 (Graduate) Class # 11825
M 6:30 – 9:15 P.M. 3 CREDITS

This course, which has a two-part component, one in translation and the other in interpreting, is designed to introduce students to the discipline of translation and interpreting. The main objective of this class is to teach students how to switch safely and accurately between the source and the target language (Spanish<>English) both written and oral. This class will include an intensive study of vocabulary, grammar, sentence structure, and translation difficulties as well as an intensive study of sight translation, consecutive and simultaneous interpreting in a variety of fields.

Given the nature of the course of study, we will fluctuate between Spanish and English, depending on the object of our discussion or on the direction in which we are translating. Although the weight of this course is on practice, there will be some mini-lectures on theory. Whenever possible, translation samples will be presented to illustrate theoretical issues.

There will be readings (assigned by the professor), exercises based on class lectures, Online Application Exercises, Individual and group translations assignments, one Midterm translation project, one Final interpreting Project. Note: A class presentation is required for Undergraduate students (4070-601); Graduate students (5070-601 level) will work on a specific Translation and Interpreting project.

The Voice of the Other in 20th Century Spanish-American Literature

Dr. Elaine S. Brooks
Online, 3 credits

In this course we will read three novels whose characters represent people without power and without a voice to express their struggle for political and social justice. We will begin with Alejo Carpentier’s novel, El siglo de las luces, in which the historical depiction of 18th-century Caribbean revolt comes to light not through the major protagonists of that period, but through those who suffered the effects of political injustice— they are the “other” whose voices are not registered in historical documents. Carpentier gives voice to those who do not belong to the “voz oficial” of the historical moment when the ideals of the French Revolution flowed into the Caribbean islands. As the European ideals of liberty clash with regional dictators and enslaved people, Carpentier’s common men become the central point around whom the fight for liberty and life are pitted against treason, death, and terror.

In a different land and time, our second novel, Juan Rulfo’s, Pedro Pármeno, describes social injustice during the Mexican Revolution as depicted by the ephemeral “others.” Most of the characters are ghosts who have died at the hand of the cruel and ambitious Pedro Pármeno. This novel has many twists and turns in terms of narrative techniques and flashbacks. The reader becomes a participant in the novel, and in some sense, one of the “others” because the reader must weave the story into a coherent portrait of familial betrayal against the backdrop of historical upheaval. The same kind of incoherence that the reader must piece together occurs in our third novel, Manuel Puig’s, Boquitas pintadas. The entire work is a flashback based on popular forms of communication in Argentina during the 1930’s. The main character Juan Carlos dies at the beginning and only through diary entries, sordid notes, love letters and his lovers’ memories do we understand that the novel’s true protagonists are the silent women who loved and hated Juan Carlos. Boquitas pintadas is a feminist novel whose many subtexts are brought to the surface by the reader who must unravel the mystery behind the women’s silenced voices.
