Kristina Peterson

Visiting Assistant Professor in Planning and Urban Studies

“Adaptation: Between Now and Then”

Kristina Peterson, is an applied social scientist doing barrier-crossing work that supports and prepares academic scientists and community members to collaborate together. She is a co-founder of the Lowlander Center, as well as the National Hazards Mitigation Association and the Gender and Disaster Network. She currently is a visiting assistant professor in the department of planning and urban studies at UNO and formerly a researcher with the Center for Hazards Assessment Response and Technology, CHART-UNO.

Email: kjpeters@uno.edu