Jeffrey Thomas

Principal of Thomas Strategies, LLC

“Financing Recovery & Resilience: Does Available Funding Create a Sustainable Future or the Day before the Storm?”

Jeffrey Thomas, Principle of Thomas Strategies, LLC, is an attorney with over 15 years of experience working with public and private-sector clients to shape public policies, government programs, and public-private investment strategies related to sustainable community and economic development; disaster recovery and resilience; environmental protection and natural resource management, and real estate and public infrastructure financing. For several years after Hurricane Katrina, Jeffrey served as Special Assistant to the City of New Orleans’ Office of Recovery & Development and supervised the development of policies and programs to use over $1 billion in federal funding for post-disaster housing, economic development, and public infrastructure reinvestment. Jeffrey is a 2001 graduate of Tulane Law School; and 1994 graduate of Millersville University (PA), with a Bachelor of Science in Biology

Email: jefftstrategies@gmail.com