ENGL 2032: SURVEY OF AMERICAN LITERATURE AFTER THE CIVIL WAR
This course is designed for English majors with the appropriate level of difficulty; however, non-majors are welcome.

SECTION P001  TTH  11:00 AM – 12:15 PM  E. LEWIS
This course is designed to give students an overview of American literature from the post Civil War to the contemporary period that emphasizes both content and the formal elements of style and structure. We will be looking at different genres and sub genres such as essays, autobiographies, plays, short stories, novels and poetry. This course will also introduce students to the terms that categorize the various literary movements during the periods, for example, realism, regionalism, naturalism, modernism and postmodernism. The cultural and historical context of these periods will be an important focus of our study. In this regard, you will become familiar with the terms that define the various historical periods, such as the Gilded Age, the Jazz Age, Harlem Renaissance, etc.

REQUIREMENTS include:
- Course requirements will include two exams, two formal papers, scheduled quizzes and class presentations.
ENGL 2041: MAJOR AMERICAN WRITERS

This course satisfies the General Education Literature Requirement.

SECTION P001 MWF 1:00 – 1:50 K. LE
SECTION P002 TTH 9:30 – 10:45 K. LE

This course will cover American literature from the 1920s to the contemporary period in a variety of genres, including drama, poetry, short story, novella, and non-fiction. Students will analyze the content, craft, and historical context of selected works then form interpretations from their findings. How do these texts shape and define diverse perspectives of America over the past hundred years? Writers include Langston Hughes, Zora Neale Hurston, John Cheever, Joyce Carol Oates, Denis Johnson, Stephen King, George Saunders, Joy Harjo, and others.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE:

Two essays analyzing a text or texts we are reading, a midterm and a final exam, quizzes and reading responses about the texts we read, and a discussion forum.

TEXTS:
Pastoralia by George Saunders
Non-fiction, short stories, essays, and poems found online.

ENGL 2043: NEW ORLEANS LITERATURE

This course satisfies the General Education Literature Requirement.

SECTION O001 ONLINE J. KUCHTA

ENGL 2071: AFRO-AMERICAN LITERATURE I
This course satisfies the General Education Literature Requirement. These courses are designed for non-English majors but open to majors as electives.

SECTION W001
TTH 11:00 – 12:15  J. SAFFOLD
ONLINE  SYNCHRONOUS

This course will introduce students to early African American literature and letters. Beginning with narratives detailing the Middle Passage, moving to impassioned speeches for abolition, and ending with important early twentieth century questions about how to move “Up From Slavery” and what makes the “Souls of Black Folk.” Together, we will explore how people who once were denied the abilities to read and write used paper and pen to advocate for change.
We will read poetry, short stories, slave narratives, and explore digital resources like the Slave Voyages database of slave ship records.

The literature in this course will be situated within a social, historical, political, and cultural context as a means to investigate the intersections of literature and culture. We will chronologically journey from the harrowing narratives of bondage to post-Black Reconstruction debates on the intellectual and aesthetic obligations of African American literature.

REQUIREMENTS

INCLUDE:
- Reading & class notes
- Class participation
- Great Black Literary Debates Tournament
- A final exam

TEXTS:
- Norton Anthology of African American Literature, Volume 1

---

ENGL 2090: SPECIAL STUDIES IN LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE

This course satisfies the General Education Literature Requirement. These courses are designed for non-English majors but open to majors as electives.

SCIENCE FICTION LITERATURE

SECTION 001

ONLINE

K. RAYES

This course is a survey of major authors of Science Fiction and their works, and major themes of the genre. In particular, the course will focus on the precursors to modern Sci-Fi, the history and evolution of the genre, and its contemporary diverse manifestations, such as Afro-Futurism and Cyberpunk. Students will analyze Sci-Fi texts, focusing on how the genre can dramatize and explore approaches to contemporary issues. The course includes early visionary texts, the futuristic visions of Jules Verne and H. G. Wells, Post-Cold War texts by Vonnegut and others, and landmark contemporary texts that examine trends such as the video game revolution and artificial intelligence.

REQUIREMENTS

INCLUDE:
- Students will contribute to regular Discussion Boards, take regular online quizzes and two exams, write two short essays and produce a short creative online presentation.

TEXTS:
- Card, Ender's Game;
- Dick, Do Androids Dream of Electric Sheep?;
- Vonnegut, The Sirens of Titan;
- Shelley, Frankenstein;
- and documents available on Moodle.
CRAFTING THE WITCH

SECTION P002  TTH  11:00 – 12:15  S. RICHARDSON

The popularity of the witch as a literary and theatrical subject is undeniable. From classical times through the Enlightenment, concerns about witches and their craft were taken seriously by authors as well as by the public at large. Since women were accused of and executed for suspected acts of witchcraft throughout Europe and North America from as early as the 1480s through the 1750s, their presence in literature and on the stage is perhaps unsurprising, but their many representations are often unexpected. As we read a variety of works that include characterizations of these remarkable figures, we will consider the dynamic of prejudicial treatment and accusations of evil. Through our study of literary works featuring witches, and supplementary material about witchcraft, we will attempt to clarify why early modern people felt witches posed such a real and dangerous threat to the community and also consider what fictional depictions of witches tell us about the lives of the very real women persecuted for these "crimes”.

REQUIREMENTS

Students will complete weekly reading response assignments, two 4-6 page essays, one 5-7 page essay and a final presentation.

TEXTS:

Condé, I, Tituba, Black Witch of Salem.
Euripides, Medea
Fletcher and Massinger, The Prophetess
Miller, The Crucible
Rowe, Penguin Book of Witches (excerpts)
Rowley, Dekker and Ford, The Witch of Edmonton
Seneca, Medea
Shakespeare, Macbeth
This course, designed primarily for students in science and engineering, will introduce the basic forms and conventions of technical writing.

REQUIREMENTS

INCLUDE:
For most sections, there will be a major technical report (researched and documented), several other writing assignments, and one oral assignment.

TEXTS:
Consult the UNO Bookstore about texts, as they vary with the instructor.

ENGL 2161: INTRODUCTION TO WRITING FICTION

SECTION P001

TTH

11:00 – 12:15

M. WALSH

ENG 2161 teaches students the basics of fiction writing. The first half of the course will focus on studying published works by renowned authors, as well as establishing a working knowledge of craft techniques (POV, Plot, Character, etc.). The second half of the course will focus on “workshopping” original stories written by the students and discussed by their peers.

REQUIREMENTS

INCLUDE:
Each student will turn in two original stories, as well as complete a variety of writing exercises and reading responses. Students should budget for printing costs for story distribution.

TEXTS:

ENGL/FTA 2200: INTRODUCTION TO PLAYWRITING

SECTION P001

TTH

2:00 – 3:15

J. MAXWELL

In this course students will explore one of the most vibrant and engaging methods of artistic expression, a contemporary artform built on thousands of years of development. It’s the only type of writing where the writer gets real bodies to manifest their words and where their words must inspire a myriad of other theatre artists. This complex relationship poses unique challenges and opportunities for artists working in language. Those challenges will constantly inform the development of student work during the semester. Within this multifaceted approach, we will also look at the role of traditional and non-traditional narrative structures and how they operate on the stage. Students need no experience as creative writers to take this course, just curiosity and openness to self-expression.
REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: Students will write and revise multiple ten-minute plays while also providing verbal and written feedback to their peers.

ENGL 2228: READING POETRY

This course satisfies the General Education Literature Requirement. English majors should not take this course, as it duplicates material covered in 2258.

SECTION O001 ONLINE ASYNCHRONOUS K. MCDONALD
SECTION P001 MWF 11:00 – 11:50 K.MCDONALD

This course is designed to enhance students’ understanding, appreciation, and enjoyment of poetry. Students will read, discuss, analyze, and write about poems that represent a broad range of time and a variety of forms, movements, and culture.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: Two short analytical essays, a midterm and a final exam, and frequent quizzes

TEXTS: TBA

ENGL 2238: READING FICTION

This course satisfies the General Education Literature Requirement. English majors should not take this course, as it duplicates material covered in 2258.

SECTION O001 ONLINE ONLINE E. LEWIS

This online course is designed to introduce students to some of the major works of American, British and Continental fiction from the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, both short stories and novels, through an examination of the formal elements of fiction. The syllabus is arranged both chronologically and thematically; a focus in the course is historical background since an understanding of the cultural context of a literary work enriches an appreciation of the text. The major directive in the course is the acquisition of literary analysis skills; the critical thinking skills acquired in this course will be valuable in your other courses.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: Course requirements will include two major papers and three exams: take home exam 1, take home midterm exam and a proctored final exam. I will provide detailed information about the paper assignments and exams.

TEXTS: TBD
ENGL 2238: READING FICTION

This course satisfies the General Education Literature Requirement.

English majors should not take this course, as it duplicates material covered in 2258.

SECTION P001

MWF 11:00 – 11:50

C. PETTAWAY

This course will introduce you to the novel as a literary form and explore its development in different historical and cultural contexts. You’ll read selected novels, discuss them, and learn to write critically about them. Readings include novels by women, African Americans, other minorities, and non-Western writers.

REQUIREMENTS

Reading one to two novels per month.

TEXTS:

TBD

ENGL 2258: INTERPRETING LITERATURE

This course is designed for English majors with the appropriate level of difficulty.

Departmental consent is required.

SECTION P001

MWF 10 – 10:50

L. WHITE

English 2258 is designed to prepare English majors for advanced literary study. To that end, we will undertake close readings of several texts from the major genres of non-fiction, fiction, poetry, and drama. To develop our close reading skills, we will become familiar with literary terminology as well as the conventions singular to each major genre, in the process building a vocabulary of critical terms.

REQUIREMENTS

The course is writing intensive, so there will be a number of short-to-medium-length essays (3-6 typed pages); we will also write a critical research paper, and there will be three exams.

TEXTS:

ENGL 2341: SURVEY OF BRITISH LITERATURE I

This course is designed for English majors with the appropriate level of difficulty; however, non-majors are welcome.

SECTION P001

TTH 9:30 – 10:45

S. RICHARDSON
In this course, we will study the development of British literature from its known beginnings to the late eighteenth century. Students will become familiar with important literary terms, historical trends, and recurrent themes as we explore works written in a variety of genres. We will examine the role of works that are considered standard to the canon, but we will also examine the ways in which the canon must evolve and be readdressed on a regular basis—for example, we will address early women writers who have gained greater acknowledgement and representation in recent years, exploring their contributions to and engagement with early British literature and culture.

REQUIREMENTS
Students will complete weekly reading response assignments, two 4-6 page essays, one 5-7 page essay and a final presentation.

TEXTS:

ENGL 2342: SURVEY OF BRITISH LITERATURE II
This course is designed for English majors with the appropriate level of difficulty; however, non-majors are welcome.

SECTION P001
MWF 11:00 – 11:50  L. WHITE

This course explores major poetry, non-fiction, and fiction of the Romantic, Victorian, and Early Twentieth-century periods in their historical, social, and cultural contexts. We will undertake close readings of these periods’ most significant and representative texts, examining them from a number of critical perspectives in order to develop understanding of the works themselves, their authors’ characteristic concerns, and the cultural conditions that helped to shape these writers and their work.

REQUIREMENTS
A research essay, a midterm exam, and a final exam.

TEXTS:

ENGL 2377: THE BIBLE AS LITERATURE
This course satisfies the General Education Literature Requirement.

SECTION P001
MWF 11 – 11:50  L. VERNER

In this course we consider the Bible as a work of literature rather than as a religious text. We read selections from the Old Testament, the New Testament, and the Apocrypha and explore... the many genres used in the Bible—epic, folklore, poetry, history, et cetera. Emphasis is placed on the historical and cultural circumstances under which our selections were produced and the implications of those circumstances for our reading of the text.

REQUIREMENTS

- A midterm, a final exam, and two papers are required.

TEXTS:

ENGL 2378: INTRODUCTION TO WOMEN’S LITERATURE

This course satisfies the General Education Literature Requirement.

SECTION P001

- MW
- 2:00 – 3:15
- N. EASTERLIN

This course provides a sophomore-level introduction to literature by women. Through readings in the range of literary genres—poetry, fiction, drama, and nonfiction—we will explore the social, psychological, and literary relationship of individual women writers to their historical contexts. The course will focus on literature from the eighteenth century up to the present.

REQUIREMENTS

- Daily quizzes, three exams, and two papers.

TEXTS:

WGS 2010: INTRODUCTION TO WOMEN AND GENDER STUDIES

SECTION P001

- MWF
- 11:00 – 11:50
- L. VERNER

This course is an introduction to the discipline of Women’s and Gender Studies. It aims to give the student a historical understanding of the experiences of women globally and nationally, as well as the vocabulary for speaking about women’s history and contemporary issues. This will require the student to read and respond to both critical and personal essays from a variety of disciplines, including but not limited to sociology, anthropology, history, political science, art, film, and literature.

REQUIREMENTS

- Three exams, a research paper with class presentation on the research topic, and class participation are required.
ENGL 2521: INTRODUCTION TO SHAKESPEARE

SECTION P001    MWF    11:00 – 11:50    D. RUTLEDGE

This is an introductory course to the plays of William Shakespeare. No previous study of Shakespeare is expected. We will read seven plays, covering each of his genres.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE:

Two tests during the semester, plus a final exam, two papers, and weekly participation.

TEXTS:

A Midsummer Night’s Dream,
As You Like It,
Henry IV (Part One),
Hamlet,
King Lear,

ENGL 3381: INTRODUCTION TO CONTEMPORARY THEORY

Prerequisite: ENGL 2258. Open to English majors only.

SECTION P001    TTH    2:00 – 3:15    J. GERY

This course provides an introduction to contemporary theory and its application to reading literature, as well as to analyzing other texts, phenomena and contexts. The seminar will focus primarily on various modern and postmodern theoretical approaches to literature, including Russian Formalism, New Criticism, Psychoanalytic Criticism, Structuralism, Marxist and Critical Theory, Archetypal Criticism, New Historicism, Deconstructionism, Feminist Theory and Gender Studies, Postcolonialism, and Ecocriticism, as time allows. While lectures will provide some historical context for these evolving perspectives, class time will be devoted to close readings of original texts that define each theory, as well as to applying them to poetry, drama, and fiction. Oral presentations and papers will allow students to examine individual theories in more detail than possible in class.
ENGL 3381: INTRODUCTION TO CONTEMPORARY THEORY
Prerequisite: ENGL 2258. Open to English majors only.

Theory gives us different lenses to talk about literature. This course explores various lenses by pairing literary texts with a broadly representative selection of contemporary theory. Along the way, students will perform literary analysis with take-home essay exams. All texts are available for free on the course website.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE:
Two essay exams and several in-class quizzes

TEXTS:

“Dancing After Hours” by Andre Dubus
Selections from History of Sexuality by Michel Foucault
“Song of Myself” by Walt Whitman

ENGL 4043/5043: NEW ORLEANS LITERATURE
While “New Orleans” recently celebrated its tricentennial, the writers of the “Bulbancha Is Still a Place” zine remind us: “Before the first Europeans came here, it was a place where people from over 40 distinct Native groups crisscrossed, traded, followed game and fish, moved due to rising and falling waters, and interacted with one another.” Ever-changing, this has been a gathering place for sacred and routine exchanges, profane and profitable transactions, for well over a thousand years. As this course takes up the topic of “New Orleans Literature” then, we will anchor understandings of our local multiethnic/multiracial culture and history from this critical and expansive context. Just as levees were built to contain shifting networks of waterways in the service of plantation slavery, colonial governance, and later international container shipping, so have there been attempts to contain the stories of this place. But the stories, like the waterways, refuse to be controlled. How does the literature of this place help us understand New Orleans as an African city, an indigenous city, an immigrant city, a queer city, a city of sex work, a city made out of mounds of seashells? We will read Choctaw tales, punk graphic memoirs, speculative fiction from 2019 and 1854, Creole short stories, spoken-word poetry, plays, and more. Students will connect the literary genealogy of the city with its rich genealogies of performance, music, food, film, and visual arts.

REQUIREMENTS
INCLUDE:

TEXTS:
- George Washington Cable, The Grandissimes (Kessinger)
- Kate Chopin, The Awakening and Other Stories (Modern Library)
- Charles Chesnutt, Paul Marchand, F.M.C. (University Press of Mississippi)

- Bulbancha Is Still a Place: Indigenous Culture from New Orleans zine (edited by Jeffery U. Darensbourg)
- Maurice Carlos Ruffin, We Cast a Shadow (Penguin Random House)

ENGL 4093/5093: BLACK WOMEN WRITERS

SECTION 0001 ONLINE ASYNCHRONOUS J. SAFFOLD

In the wake of the #BlackLivesMatter Movement and moments of reckoning like #MeToo, the intersection of race and gender has become one of the most contentious spaces in contemporary times, especially for Black women. Authors, theorists, and critics writing as and in service to Black women over the twentieth and twenty-first centuries have provided critical entrees into the thoughts, hopes, and disappointments that come with being Black and a woman. This course seeks to understand the thoughts, concerns, and words of Black women through literature. A variety of fiction and non-fiction readings by and about Black women will highlight the ways race, class, gender and other socially constructed forms of difference combine, intersect, and complicate narratives of Blackness and femininity. Special attention will be paid to Black women as agents in their lives, Black women as thinkers and theorizers, and the various ways in which Black women in the U.S. have reimagined our world.

REQUIREMENTS

INCLUDE:

- Group presentations
- Weekly Discussion Questions
- Black woman writer profile

TEXTS:

TBD

ENGL 4154/5154: ADVANCED CREATIVE NONFICTION WRITING

SECTION P001  MW  3:30 – 4:45  E. BRINA

The goal of the course is to learn, practice, and refine the craft of writing creative nonfiction, which includes the subgenres of memoirs, profiles, travel writing, nature writing, literary journalism, etc. Although creative nonfiction deals primarily with facts, real events and real experiences, literary devices such as scene, plot, character, arc, and voice are concertedly employed. Students will compose and read drafts, provide and receive feedback, incorporate feedback and revise their drafts in a constructive and supportive setting. We will also read and draw inspiration from masters of the craft such as Cheryl Strayed, David Sedaris, James Baldwin, Eula Biss, David Foster Wallace, Joan Didion, and many others.

REQUIREMENTS

INCLUDE:

TEXTS:

TBD

ENGL 4155/5155: PROFESSIONAL EDITING AND WRITING

SECTION O001  ONLINE  D. PIANO

REQUIREMENTS

INCLUDE:

TEXTS:

The painter Pablo Picasso once said, “Inspiration exists, but it must find you working.” In this course, we will spend the semester as working poets. You will work to find and hone your own poetic voice through experimentation with both subject matter and form, and you will revise the poems you draft with these techniques. The work you do in this class will, hopefully, make inspiration less elusive. By reading and discussing contemporary poetry, and by taking part in regular workshops with your peers, you will gain confidence and skill as a poet and as a reader. Our class will encourage you to be creative and to explore a variety of approaches to writing poetry.

Your assignments will include a presentation, a close reading essay, feedback on your classmates’ poems, and a portfolio of significantly revised poetry written throughout the semester. Graduate students will have an extra assignment.

Ordinary Genius / Kim Addonizio
Letters to a Young Poet / Rainer Maria Rilke
Deaf Republic / Ilya Kaminsky
Deluge / Leila Chatti
Don’t Call Us Dead / Danez Smith
The Year of Blue Water / Yanyi

Are you interested in building a stronger web presence for professional reasons, writing freelance articles for the web, learning how and where to write web content, using social media as advocacy work, or showcasing your journalism/creative work? This course is designed for students who are interested in gaining more insight and practice with a variety of communication genres and professions associated with professional writing. Students will be introduced to rhetorical theories, principles, and practices of professional writing and will produce collaborative and individual documents through the course of the semester. While the emphasis in the class will be on writing for online audiences, both long and short form, we will also cover advanced theories of document design, visual communication, and ethical issues as they relate to communicating to diverse audiences.

The course intends to provide students with the ability to understand, construct, and manipulate written and visual information in a way that is directly transferable to a wide variety of professional situations that include advocacy writing, social media strategizing, freelance and knowledge-based journalism. Lastly, the course intends to improve one’s writing through weekly writing exercises that are both practical and conceptual.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: Projects will include creating a visual presentation, learning how to pitch stories and interview, establishing a social media presence, and writing a feature article for publication

TEXTS:

LITERATURE AND THE SENSE OF PLACE

SECTION P001       MW       3:30 – 4:45       N. EASTERLIN

Human beings depend on their environments, variously exploiting or contributing to them. Literature often reveals the complex relationship of people to places; at the same time, the organized study of place is a thriving topic in the social science. Discovering how individuals and groups feel about environments and why they feel as they do provide self-knowledge and a guide to establishing beneficial relationships to locales. This interdisciplinary course explores the application of place studies to selected fiction and nonfiction of the North American West, an area historically and mythically cast as harsh and forbidding. Class time will be divided between discussion of readings in the social sciences and those in contemporary literature.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE:

Reading quizzes, annotated bibliography, research paper and, mid-term and final exams.

TEXTS:

Ana Castillo, So Far from God
Percival Everett, Watershed
Alice Munro, Selected Stories
Annie Proulx, Close Range
Wallace Stegner, Collected Stories

ENGL 4807/5807: EARLIER VICTORIAN LITERATURE

SECTION P001       TTH       9:30 – 10:45       L. WHITE

We will read major writers of the immediate post-Romantic era, giving particular attention to early and mid-career Tennyson and the Brownings. We will also read some non-fiction—perhaps a few excerpts from the critical writings of Thomas Carlyle, John Stuart Mill, and John Ruskin. We will examine ways in which the age’s literature was influenced by and responded to political debate and democratic reform, to increasing industrialization and scientific advance. We will also examine these writers’ various responses to the immense achievement of their Romantic forebears as well as explore how their work anticipates aspects of modernism. We will also read a representative novel of the period: Dickens' Hard Times.

REQUIREMENTS

INCLUDE: Requirements include a midterm, a final, and two medium-length papers, one of which will be a research essay, and serious and regular contributions to class discussion.

TEXTS:
The Norton Anthology of English Literature (The Victorian Age), 10th edition, Volume E
To be supplemented with documents posted to Moodle

SECTION P001
TTH
3:30 – 4:45
J. GERY

This course surveys British and American poetry from 1900 through World War II, from W.B. Yeats through W.H. Auden. The primary focus will be on Yeats, Ezra Pound, Gertrude Stein, H.D., T.S. Eliot, William Carlos Williams, Langston Hughes, Laura Riding, and Wallace Stevens, but as time and interest allow, we will also look at representative poems by Thomas Hardy, Robert Frost, Mina Loy, World War I poets (Rosenberg, Owen, Sassoon), Marianne Moore, Edna St. Vincent Millay, E.E. Cummings, Robinson Jeffers, Countee Cullen, Claude McKay, Hart Crane and Auden. The class will focus on the Modernist upheaval and revolutionary ideas at the start of the twentieth century, as well as the social, ideological, and cultural context in which these poets wrote. But most class time will be devoted to the careful reading and discussion of individual poems.

REQUIREMENTS

INCLUDE: Requirements will include a short essay, a midterm, one class oral presentation (two for graduate students), a term paper, and a final exam.

THE WORKS OF ZORA NEALE HURSTON AND ALICE WALKER

SECTION W001  Th  6 – 8:45  J. SAFFOLD
ONLINE  SYNCHRONOUS

Zora Neale Hurston was one of the most highly regarded Black woman writers of the twentieth century. Yet, she died penniless buried in an unmarked grave, resting in relative obscurity. Until Alice Walker went “Looking for Zora,” erected a tombstone on her gravesite, and insisted the world acknowledge Hurston’s brilliance. Walker also rose to prominence in her right during the late twentieth century with her culture shifting novel, The Color Purple, coining the term womanism, and championing women’s issues the world over. Together, the works of Hurston and Walker stitch together an aesthetic that is undeniably Southern, Black, and woman. By reading Hurston and Walker together, students will gain a better sense of how and why Black women’s literature is the foundation of Black feminist thinking.

ENGL 6090: SPECIAL STUDIES IN AMERICAN LITERATURE

CROSSCURRENTS IN U.S. SOUTHERN AND CARIBBEAN LITERATURE

SECTION W001  T  6 – 8:45  E. STEEBY
This course will consider material and cultural histories that span the Caribbean and the U.S. South. We’ll analyze how watery currents, weather, and other natural phenomena, as well as circuits of trade and migrations of people and culture created regional zones that transcend the contemporary national boundaries imposed on these geographies and locations. We will read literature spanning from the 19th to the 21st-century that depicts the many legacies and adaptations of colonization, plantation slavery, and technologies of extraction in the U.S. South and Caribbean. Key settings include: Louisiana, Haiti, Grenada, Jamaica, Cuba, Georgia, Alabama, Antigua, Florida, and Puerto Rico. Students will consider how earlier colonial systems and practices are related to contemporary economies of tourism and development. We’ll center the contributions of Black women writers and writers of color and analyze the role of narrative as a resistance strategy and a tool for imagining maroon life, revolutionary pasts and futures. Our literary texts will primarily be novels, but we will read some short fiction and nonfiction as well. To theorize and historicize these texts and their significance, we’ll read scholarship by Sylvia Wynter, Edouard Glissant, Joseph Roach, Monique Allewaert, M. Jacqui Alexander, Lisa Lowe, Omise’eke Natasha Tinsley and others.

ENGL 6153: UNO PUBLISHING LAB

SECTION P001
MW
3:30 – 4:45
A. Himmelstein
This class is designed to teach you how to take a manuscript and turn it into a successful book. Rather than doing this through lecture and abstraction, we will be doing this by choosing one book and taking it through the publishing process. Students will become familiar with editing for content, copy-editing, and publishing industry practice. Students will also learn the business side of publishing, including marketing, distribution, economics, bookstores, printing, design, and author relations.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: Written manuscript evaluations; regular participation in discussion; global and line edits of one selected manuscript; and a final project related to the publication of the manuscript.

TEXTS: Biel, Joe. A People’s Guide to Publishing

ENGL 6232: STUDIES IN RHETORIC AND COMPOSITION

RHETORIC AND DRUGS

SECTION | W | 6:00 – 8:45 | R. GOAD
---|---|---|---
W001 | HYBRID

Starting with the Sophists and moving into critical theory, students first consider the intoxicating potential of rhetoric itself. Then, adopting a rhetorical perspective, students pivot to contemporary debates about drugs in American culture. Along the way, students write and revise short analytic essays and attend weekly lectures exploring texts from various genres, including propaganda, scientific research, investigative journalism, and memoir.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: Several short essays

TEXTS:

- “Encomium of Helen” by Gorgias
- Phaedrus by Plato
- “Plato’s Pharmacy” by Jacuques Derrdia
- Reefer Madness directed by Louis J. Gasiner
- “The Social Construction of the Crack Epidemic in the Print Media” by Donna M. Hartman
- Survival Math by Deckle Edge
- Cartoon All-Stars to the Rescue directed by Milton Grey
- Crime of the Century directed by Alex Gibney

- “The Wrong Way to Fight the Opioid Crisis” by Paige Williams
- A Different Medicine: Postcolonial Healing in the Native American Church by Joseph Calabrese
- How to Murder Your Life by Cat Marnel
When famously discoursing upon the “purpose of playing,” Hamlet also reflects upon the uncanny ability of an actor to transform into a specific role, wondering, “is it not monstrous...?” In so doing, Shakespeare reminds the audience of the ferocious critiques of actors, playwrights, and playgoers occurring in the world outside the theater. This course will center on dramatic works of the early modern period that are deeply concerned with representations of actors and acting, such as Kyd’s The Spanish Tragedy (1592) and Massinger’s The Roman Actor (1626). We will read these works alongside some of the many anti-theatrical polemics circulating during the period, like Rankins’ A Mirror of Monsters (1587) and Prynne’s Histriomastix: The Player’s Scourge (1633), which contributed to the closing of England’s theaters from 1642 to 1660. The class will also examine defenses of the stage, particularly Heywood’s influential An Apology for Actors (1612). In this way students will gain a better understanding not only of the way theater has been and still is denigrated, but how playwrights of the era responded to such critiques through their work, highlighting the perilous position of those closely associated with theatrical practice and marginalized because of it.

REQUIREMENTS

INCLUDE:

Students will complete a 1-2 page research essay proposal, an annotated bibliography with 10 entries, two presentations, and a final essay project of 15-20 pages as well as informal weekly writing assignments.

SEX, GENDER, AND THE SHORT STORY

SECTION W001

T

5 – 7:40

N. EASTERLIN

HYBRID

This interdisciplinary course will draw on evolutionary psychology to explore the dynamics of sexual relationships and the construction of gender, focusing on topics including mating strategies, power, and deceit within selected twentieth century short fiction. Influenced by emergent psychological theories positing both the human unconscious and the sexual basis of behavior, authors of the early twentieth century were able to foreground the motive force of sexual desire and the power struggles attendant upon it in a way that had not been possible in literature of earlier eras. Organized around men and women writers who explore unconscious motivations; socially constructed sex differences; and related power dynamics, this course will begin with an introduction to evolutionary psychology and other social sciences in the first few weeks. Subsequently, we will alternate between literary reading and analysis and additional theoretical and critical readings.

REQUIREMENTS

INCLUDE:

An annotated bibliography, a research paper, a mid-term, and a final exam.
ENGL 6807: STUDIES IN THE VICTORIAN PERIOD

CULTURE AND ANARCHY: ARNOLD, WILD, FORSTER

SECTION O001  ONLINE  L. WHITE

In this seminar, we will examine a prominent topic in post-Romantic and Modernist literature and culture: broadly put, the deep cultural tensions that developed between the practical/material and the aesthetic/spiritual spheres. Many texts of the last couple of centuries explore the seemingly insuperable divide between these seemingly antithetical dispositions. Our focus will be on three authors whose writings address this conflict by exploring its causes and effects and even propose solutions. We will read select cultural criticism by Matthew Arnold, focusing on Culture and Anarchy (1869), a collection of essays expressing the hope that culture can oppose the proliferating forces of “selfishness and materialism” and bring society to an awareness of its “ideal destiny”; several of Wilde’s non-fiction writings that both build on Arnold’s critical positions and anticipate many of Forster’s; and Forster’s novel Howards End (1910), “the most explicit test of Arnold’s notion of culture in our literature” according to Wilfrid Stone. We will also read and discuss a handful of Forster’s essays on aesthetics from the ’30s and ’40s relevant to this topic.

REQUIREMENTS
INCLUDE:

TEXTS:
Arnold, Culture and Anarchy and Other Writings (ed. Stefan Collini)
Wilde, The Artist as Critic: Critical Writings of Oscar Wilde (ed. Richard Ellmann)
Forster, Howards End

JOUR 6700: SPECIAL TOPICS IN PRINT JOURNALISM
This course will explore digital journalism via literature, in-class discussion, and fieldwork. Students will learn how technological developments have changed the face of journalism in the 21st century and probe the positive and negative aspects of these changes. Students will learn how to write stories for online publications, how to use social media effectively as a broadcast tool, how to create podcasts and spoken-word reports, and how to use a smartphone as an all-purpose reporting tool. Students will also learn how to verify sources online and explore ethical issues that affect digital journalism such as privacy rights and information sharing by whistleblowers.
