SPRING 2022 AT-A-GLANCE

The University of New Orleans anticipates the Spring 2022 semester will look much like a traditional semester. We plan to maximize in-person instruction and deliver the UNO experience to our new and returning Privateers!

The health and well-being of our students, faculty, and staff is always a priority, and we have worked to ensure that students and faculty are provided with learning environments that meet CDC guidelines. For changes and updates, regularly check UNO's COVID-19 Information page at uno.edu/covid-19.

TEACHING MODES

While the majority of classes offered in the Spring 2022 semester will be offered in the traditional, face-to-face format, some classes will be available in online or hybrid format.

Students should register as soon as possible to get into their preferred type of class.

Students can contact their advisor with any questions.

FACE-TO-FACE
Traditional in-classroom teaching

All classes meet in person, so students and the instructor are in the same physical space.

ONLINE
No in-person/face-to-face meeting required

Instruction takes place through Moodle, UNO's learning management system.

Instructors may include the use of other technologies, including Zoom.

Instruction may take place through web-conferencing (synchronous) or on-demand (asynchronous). Please contact your instructor for more information.

At the instructor's discretion, courses may require proctored online exams, which must be completed within a time frame outlined in the course syllabus.

HYBRID
Blended teaching

Students attend some classes face-to-face and some remotely. The distribution of face-to-face and remote instruction is at the discretion of the instructor.

Face-to-face meetings will take place in scheduled classroom and at scheduled time.

Remote (online) component will take place on-demand (asynchronous) through Moodle and may include web-conferencing (synchronous) through the use of other technologies, including Zoom.

Interactive course components, such as discussions and small group meetings, may take place in real time, synchronously.
