English: Fall 2023 Course Descriptions

Successful completion of English 1158 is a prerequisite to all courses numbered 2000 and above.

Successful completion of 45 hours of coursework, including six hours of 2000-level literature courses, is a prerequisite for all courses numbered 3000 and above.

WGS 2010: INTRODUCTION TO WOMEN’S AND GENDER STUDIES*

*This course satisfies the General Education Humanities Requirement.

SECTION P001  MW  2:00-3:15 PM  L. VERNER

This course is an introduction to the discipline of Women’s and Gender Studies. It aims to give the student a historical understanding of the experiences of women globally and nationally, as well as the vocabulary for speaking about women’s history and contemporary issues. This will require the student to read and respond to both critical and personal essays from a variety of disciplines, including but not limited to sociology, anthropology, history, political science, art, film, and literature.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE:

Three exams, a research paper with class presentation on the research topic, and class participation.

TEXTS:

ENGL 2031: SURVEY OF AMERICAN LITERATURE BEFORE THE CIVIL WAR

This course is designed for English majors with the appropriate level of difficulty; however, non-majors are welcome.

SECTION P001  MWF  10:00 AM – 10:50 AM  D. RUTLEDGE

A study of American literature from the Colonial period to the Civil War, emphasizing the literary elements of the texts and their relation to the literary, historical, and cultural contexts. This course is open to all students; it is required of English majors.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE:

The assignments will include two papers, two tests during the semester, a final exam and many quizzes.
ENGL 2032: SURVEY OF AMERICAN LITERATURE AFTER THE CIVIL WAR
This course is designed for English majors with the appropriate level of difficulty; however, non-majors are welcome.

SECTION P001       TTH       11:00 AM – 12:15 PM       E. STEEBY

The goal of this course, which is designed for English majors but is also open to non-majors, is to provide an overview of U.S. literature from the post-Civil War era through the twenty-first century and to develop critical perspectives on how “American” literature has been defined over time. For example, we will consider how national literatures have been shaped by: new immigrant populations, migrations of peoples within the U.S., imperial expansion, urban industrialization, and social movements. We will situate those contexts in relation to changes in literary form and genre. Students will learn to identify and analyze literary tools, strategies, and devices as they are used to construct (and rework) particular narratives. Throughout this course, we will emphasize a critical and transnational understanding of literary modes and movements, including, but not limited to: local color regionalism, the Harlem Renaissance, modernism, social realism, folklore, postmodernism, immigrant narratives, the Black Arts movement, feminist poetry, and political speech.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: two essays, midterm and final exam, weekly reading responses, and periodic quizzes.

ENGL 2041: MAJOR AMERICAN WRITERS

This course satisfies the General Education Literature Requirement.

SECTION O001       INTERNET       ASYNCH       K. LE

A study of works of important authors from 1600 to the present. Intended for non-English majors. This course will cover American literature from the 1920s to the contemporary period in a variety of genres, including drama, poetry, short story, novella, and non-fiction. Students will analyze the content, craft, and historical context of selected works then form interpretations from their findings. How do these texts shape and define diverse perspectives of America over the past hundred years? Writers include Langston Hughes, Zora Neale Hurston, John Cheever, Joyce Carol Oates, Denis Johnson, Stephen King, George Saunders, Joy Harjo, and others.
ENGL 2043: NEW ORLEANS LITERATURE

This course satisfies the General Education Literature Requirement.

SECTION 0001  INTERNET  ASYNCH  J. KUCHTA
SECTION 0002  INTERNET  ASYNCH  J. KUCHTA

This course covers selected literary works set in New Orleans. We will discuss themes (race, gender, religion, culture, etc.) common to the various genres of New Orleans literature (short stories, novels, plays, and essays). We will also analyze how and why these themes are relevant and or have changed (or not) alongside the many ways in which New Orleans itself has or hasn’t changed in the last 200 or so years.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE:
Reading quizzes, forum posts, an analytical essay, and a written midterm and final exam, both of which will have short and long-answer components.

TEXTS:
Butler, Good Scent from a Strange Mountain
Cable, Old Creole Days
Chopin, The Awakening and Selected Short Stories
Dent, Ritual Murder
Dunbar-Nelson, The Goodness of St. Roque and Other Stories
Roahen, Gumbo Tales: Finding My Seat at the New Orleans Table
Williams, A Streetcar Named Desire
Additional texts TBA.

ENGL 2072: AFRO-AMERICAN LITERATURE II

This course satisfies the General Education Literature Requirement.
These courses are designed for non-English majors but open to majors as electives.

SECTION 0001  INTERNET  ASYNCH  J. SAFFOLD

This course will introduce students to early African American literature and letters. Beginning with narratives detailing the Middle Passage, moving to impassioned speeches for abolition, and ending with important early twentieth century questions about how to move “Up From Slavery” and what makes the “Souls of Black Folk.” Together, we will explore how people who once were denied the abilities to read and write used paper and pen to advocate for change.
We will read poetry, short stories, slave narratives, and explore digital resources like the Slave Voyages database of slave ship records.

The literature in this course will be situated within a social, historical, political, and cultural context as a means to investigate the intersections of literature and culture. We will chronologically journey from the harrowing narratives of bondage to post-Black Reconstruction debates on the intellectual and aesthetic obligations of African American literature.

This course satisfies the General Education Literature Requirement.

These courses are designed for non-English majors but open to majors as electives.

20th CENTURY HORROR LIT

SECTION P001 MWF 1:00-1:50 PM K.LE

Reading, evaluation, and discussion of selected writers, works, or literary topics. May be taken twice for a maximum of six credit hours. The course will cover horror media and literature in a variety of genres and mediums from the 20th Century. Guillermo Del Toro says, “To learn what we fear is to learn who we are.” Through analysis and interpretation of the texts, students will explore how horror reflects upon us as individuals and a society. Students will learn how to write comparative analyses with texts like Interview with a Vampire and Rosemary’s Baby alongside their film adaptations. We will ask questions such as: how does horror illuminate our understanding of societal boundaries? Why are we afraid of what we are afraid of, and how can we discern meaning from those fears?

FOOD WRITING

SECTION H001
TTH
9:30-10:45 AM
T.JACOBSON

HYBRID

Through this course, students will read and practice the craft of food writing, which may include but is not limited to "feature" and academic articles, literary food writing, food blogging, reviews, recipe writing, and memoirs. Students will not only practice their writing skills but also successfully examine the cultural, political, and historical rhetoric of food and nutrition and employ these rhetorical tactics into their own texts. Students will contribute to a blog where they will post their writing assignments. Students will produce: one introductory blog post, one personal essay, one recipe or “how to,” one restaurant/other review, one food article/ethnography. Midterm exam will consist of a quiz over reading materials, and the semester will culminate with an academic research paper with MLA citations that investigates a culture through food.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE:
This is a reading and writing course. Students will read and discuss works by multiple authors, including classmates. They will complete blog posts with their writing assignments, a midterm exam over reading material, and a final research paper on a food topic of their choice.

TEXTS:
Plus, supplied PDF’s, handouts, and web-based resources/materials from other authors, such as, Michael Twitty, Edward Lee, Bryant Terry, Charlotte Druckman, David Foster Wallace, Sara Roahen, Melissa M. Martin, and other New Orleans writers.

WOMEN’S VAMPIRE LIT

SECTION P001
MWF
10:00-10:50 AM
R.WERNER
This course focuses on a selected literature of diversity. Although the most famous vampires were created by men like Bram Stoker, Sheridan LeFanu, and John Polidori, for nearly two hundred years, women’s vampire texts have shown a different side to this classic monster. Since the earliest women’s vampire literature, writers have used these monsters to engage in social criticism. In Our Vampires, Ourselves, Nina Auerbach reveals that vampires offered her “protection against a destiny of girdles, spike heels, and approval” (4). For Sue-Ellen Case, the vampire represents a challenge to discourses of both gender and sexuality: only in dominant culture is “the vampire a horror story” (9). As this course will reveal, vampire literature allows women writers to interrogate issues of gender, sexuality, class, and race. This course will explore the history of vampire literature texts by female identified authors from a range of backgrounds, races, and sexualities. These texts represent protest and critique, as much as entertainment and escapism. All offer a unique perspective not found in more widely anthologized vampire narratives.

REQUIREMENTS

INCLUDE:

Students will be assessed in a presentation and two exams, then they will apply the analytic and close reading skills they develop to individual research projects on the course’s theme.

TEXTS:

Rice's Interview with a Vampire, Scott's I, Vampire, Gomez The Gilda Stories, Moreno-Garcia Certain Dark Things, Butler Fledgling, and additional readings.

This course, designed primarily for students in science and engineering, will introduce the basic forms and conventions of technical writing.

REQUIREMENTS

INCLUDE:

For most sections, there will be a major technical report (researched and documented), several other writing assignments, and one oral assignment.

TEXTS:

Consult the UNO Bookstore about texts, as they vary with the instructor.

ENGL 2161: INTRODUCTION TO WRITING FICTION
ENG 2161 teaches students the basics of fiction writing. The first half of the course will focus on studying published works by renowned authors, as well as establishing a working knowledge of craft techniques (POV, Plot, Character, etc.). The second half of the course will focus on “workshopping” original stories written by the students and discussed by their peers.

REQUIREMENTS
INCLUDE: Each student will turn in two original stories, as well as complete a variety of writing exercises and reading responses. Students should budget for printing costs for story distribution.

ENGL 2228: READING POETRY

SECTION O001
INTERNET
ASYNCH
J. HURTER

English 2228, Reading Poetry is an introductory literature course where students will learn to read, analyze, and appreciate poetry. We will be covering a variety of poetry, written from antiquity to today. We will consider poetry’s purpose in our world; why do we read it, and why do we write it? What can poetry do that prose cannot? How do we know if something is poetry? By the end of this course, you should have a strong understanding of the tools poets use, such as form and figuration, and you should feel confident in your ability to read and enjoy poetry.

REQUIREMENTS
INCLUDE: Assignments will include three exams, an analytical essay, weekly responses and assignments, and a presentation.

S. RICHARDSON

An intensive course in writing about various literary genres, designed to sharpen literary skills. Required for English majors.

English 2258 is a writing intensive course designed to prepare English majors for advanced literary study. It centers on the careful examination and discussion of texts from four major genres: fiction, poetry, drama, and non-fiction. The key to the course will be close, analytical reading that generates a critical response or interpretation of the text, as opposed to a description or summarization of it. As you better develop your analytical reading skills over the course of the semester, you will also gain a vocabulary of important critical terms, becoming familiar with standard literary terminology, as well as the respective conventions of each major genre.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE:

Students will be expected to complete weekly discussion-response and peer-response assignments, four essay assignments, and a final presentation.

TEXTS:

ENGL 2521: SHAKESPEARE

SECTION P001 MWF 11:00 – 11:50 AM D. RUTLEDGE

Students read a selection of Shakespeare's more popular plays and may view performances as well.

This is an introductory course to the plays of William Shakespeare. No previous study of Shakespeare is expected. We will read seven plays, covering a wide range of his plays.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE:

We will have two tests, two papers, a final exam, and lots of quizzes.
ENGL 3381: INTRODUCTION TO CONTEMPORARY THEORY
Prerequisite: ENGL 2258. Open to English majors only.

SECTION P001 MW 2:00 – 3:15 PM N. EASTERNLIN

What makes a work literary? What are the preconceptions that readers bring to literary texts? What governs canonization, the process that selects and institutionalizes works of literature? Can literature effect social and political change? Can it transform individuals? What are the cognitive processes engaged in literary reading?

We won’t answer all—or any!—of these questions in English 3381. But in this basic introduction to contemporary literary theory, we’ll explore the work of key theorists from the turn of the twentieth century to the present, utilizing a theory guide, selected essays, and sample literary texts.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE:

Three essays and an essay take-home portion of the final exam; in class mid-term exam and in-class portion #1 of the final exam

TEXTS:

ENGL 3381: INTRODUCTION TO CONTEMPORARY THEORY
Prerequisite: ENGL 2258. Open to English majors only.

SECTION W001 TTH ONLINE 4:30 – 5:45 PM J. GERY

This course provides an introduction to contemporary theory and its application to reading literature, as well as to analyzing other texts, phenomena and contexts. The seminar will focus primarily on various modern and postmodern theoretical approaches to literature, including Russian Formalism, New Criticism, Psychoanalytic Criticism, Structuralism, Marxist and Critical Theory, Archetypal Criticism, New Historicism, Deconstructionism, Feminist Theory and Gender Studies, Postcolonialism, and Ecocriticism, as time allows. While lectures will provide some historical context for these evolving perspectives, class time will be devoted to close readings of original texts that define each theory, as well as to applying them to poetry and fiction. Oral presentations and papers will allow students to examine individual theories in more detail than may be possible in class discussion.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE:

Two short analytical papers, two in-class oral presentations on individual works (one literary, one theoretical), an annotated bibliography, and a research paper.

ENGL 4093/5093: STUDIES IN BLACK LITERATURE

This course covers a variety of seventeenth- and eighteenth-century narratives of slavery – mostly of slavery and emancipation. The narratives are of the north and the south, concerning the lives of men and women, some with intrusive editorial hands and others with editors who are less intrusive. Our purpose is to see what is distinct in the narratives and what themes they have in common. We want to discover how they spoke in their own time and what they have to say to ours. In the final weeks of class, we cover three novels that depict American slavery. We will discuss some of the reasons why this topic continues to engage the imaginations of American writers.
The class requires two tests, two essays, a final exam, and regular weekly participation.

All of the original narratives are available online. Students only need to purchase the three novels.

ENGL 4156/5156: ENVIRONMENTAL WRITING

SECTIONS P001   TTH   2:00-3:15 PM   J. MAXWELL

The goal of the course is for students to create science-based writing about environmental issues that is highly accessible to the ordinary reader. Students will participate and in turn lead weekly classroom discussions and exercises on a wide range of environmental themes selected by the class and two instructors for this course. Readings will be drawn from science journalism and popular texts by some of our best environmental writers. Science and non-science majors will collaborate to research and present a project and will also write an article suitable for publication. Through this class, students should become better scientists and better writers.

Note: this course should be cross-listed with BIOS 4513
