BioStabilization Systems (BoSS)

Notice seeking proposals for research to transform how live cell-based therapies are stabilized, manufactured, and distributed. At its core, BoSS addresses a foundational bottleneck in the delivery of advanced cell and gene therapies: the critical dependence on ultra-cold conditions (-80 to -196°C) for storage and transport. BoSS will yield a bioprocessing system that enables scalable production of thermally stable cells, paving the way for a new era of efficient and resilient manufacturing and distribution of biologics without any need for cold storage. BoSS-developed technologies will also accelerate many other avenues in biotechnology that directly impact healthcare, including bio-surveillance, regenerative medicine, large-scale genetic testing, blood product supply, and wound repair, in addition to improving access to a wide range of existing biotherapeutics.

Required solution summaries are due February 19, 2026. Award amounts vary.

Documenting the efficacy, safety, and acceptability of medication abortion up to 97 days

Notice seeking proposals that build upon existing knowledge by generating data that further advances evidence-informed and person-centered medication abortion care. The program will support prospective non-inferiority cohort studies that compare outcomes of mifepristone and misoprostol medication abortion among individuals at different estimated gestational durations who are receiving in-person ultrasound. Proposed research must compare a comparison group receiving care within the FDA-approved estimated gestational duration (70 days of gestation) to a study group extending from 71 days up to an endpoint chosen by the study team that is 97 days of gestation.

Proposals are due February 3, 2026. Maximum award amount is $950,000.

Early Career Research Award

Notices seeking proposals from early career investigators to undertake a research project with a focus on integrative health and wellness approaches to manage epilepsy and improve patient quality of life. This research shall be non-invasive and non-pharmacological in nature (though alternative medicine is encouraged), may be preclinical or clinical, and can range from mechanistic to therapeutic studies. Research projects selected for funding must address topics that have not been the subject of significant prior study; proposals should either explore areas where no substantive research has been conducted, or build upon preliminary or pilot studies that demonstrate promising grounds for further investigation. EWA's areas of interest include nutrition, cognition, behavior, emotion, activity, environmental, and integrative health innovation.

Proposals are due January 22, 2026. Award is up to $70,000 for one year.
